Emmy Rossum

By Terry Skin Expert Peace & Glow, $65, barneys.com. Garnier Nutritioniste Skin Renew Anti-Puff eye roller, $13, drugstores.

Q. I ran myself ragged over the holidays — going out far too late, far too often. The lack of sleep is showing on my face. What can I do?

A. Don't fret! The latest skin-care products — with rollerball applicators — will refresh your complexion in no time! Their rolling action stimulates microcirculation to quickly boost skin's radiance! Reps say stars like Emmy Rossum rely on By Terry Peace & Glow for instant overall luminosity; we've found that Garnier's Skin Renew Anti-Puff Eye Roller works brilliantly around the eyes. It's kind to your wallet too!

Q. I have an embarrassing problem: I perspire so much under my arms that I can't wear colored tops. Got any advice?

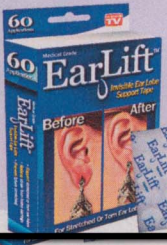

A. First, know you're not alone — according to NYC dermatologist Dr. Doris Day, nearly 4 million people in the U.S. have hyperhidrosis (excessive underarm sweating). And Dr. Day says a great way to treat it is with underarm Botox injections. Celebs have been getting 'em for years to prevent unsightly wet marks on their red carpet gowns! And now that it's FDA-approved for hyperhidrosis, you can too! It's effective (reduces sweat by up to 90 percent) and lasts about seven months. The best part? The treatment is often covered by insurance! Another option? Regular use of clinical deodorants such as Degree Women Clinical Protection ($8, drugstores)!

Q. Celebs are all wearing big earrings — but my holes are so stretched that I'm afraid to try them. Is there anything I can do?

A. Yes! According to dermatologist Dr. David Bank, there is a simple surgery (earlobe reconstruction) that can be done right in your plastic surgeon's or dermatologist's office to quickly (and permanently) fix the problem! The procedure takes just 15 minutes per lobe but isn't cheap — it can run $1,000 per ear. The surgery, however, ultimately allows for you to wear heavy earrings again: Lobes can be repierced in 4–6 weeks! (Dr. Bank cautions, however, that heavy dangles shouldn't be worn for two to three months.) Want big earrings now, like Kate? Try EarLifts. When these adhesive discs are put on the backs of your ears, they temporarily relieve sagging.
